This house is located along the north side of Black Rock Road, about one mile east of the village of Beaver Creek in Washington County, Md. It is situated on a slight slope near a small run between Black Rock Road and Interstate Route 70. It faces south.

The structure is a two-story, four-bay dwelling of local fieldstone with buff trim. A two-story, two-bay stone el with a frame addition extends to the rear or north. The frame section is covered with Victorian period coved board siding. No decorative stone work can be seen at the exterior of the building.

The windows are placed in the walls with some concern for uniformity. The three eastern openings in the front elevation are grouped together while the opening in the fourth bay is set apart. The window framing used in the front section of the house is typical of the late 19th century with wide wooden lintels and narrow jambs holding two-over-two pane Victorian period sashes. Narrow frames with a beaded edge are present in the stone portion of the el, while windows in the frame east wall addition are finished with Victorian period architraves.

The main entrance is located in the third bay from the east end of the house. Framed similarly to the windows, the entranceway includes a broad rectangular transom with arch-topped panes and two-pane sidelights. It appears to have been derived from the Greek Revival style.

A Victorian period one-story porch extends along the front of the house. It is supported by chamfered posts with bracketed tops.

The roof is covered with corrugated sheet metal and extends for several inches beyond the end walls of the house. The eaves are finished with boxing topped with ogee molding. Brick chimneys rise from inside each gable end.

The interior of the house is divided by a broad stair hall. west of the hall is one large room. The area east of the hall is divided into two rooms by a west-east partition. Woodwork in the front rooms displays symmetrical molding and decorated corner blocks. The stone portion of the el contains one room, other rooms present in the frame addition. In the basement in the northeast foundation wall of the main section of the house is a window which appears much older than others present in the house. It has wide wooden framing members with pegged joining and quarter round molded trim.

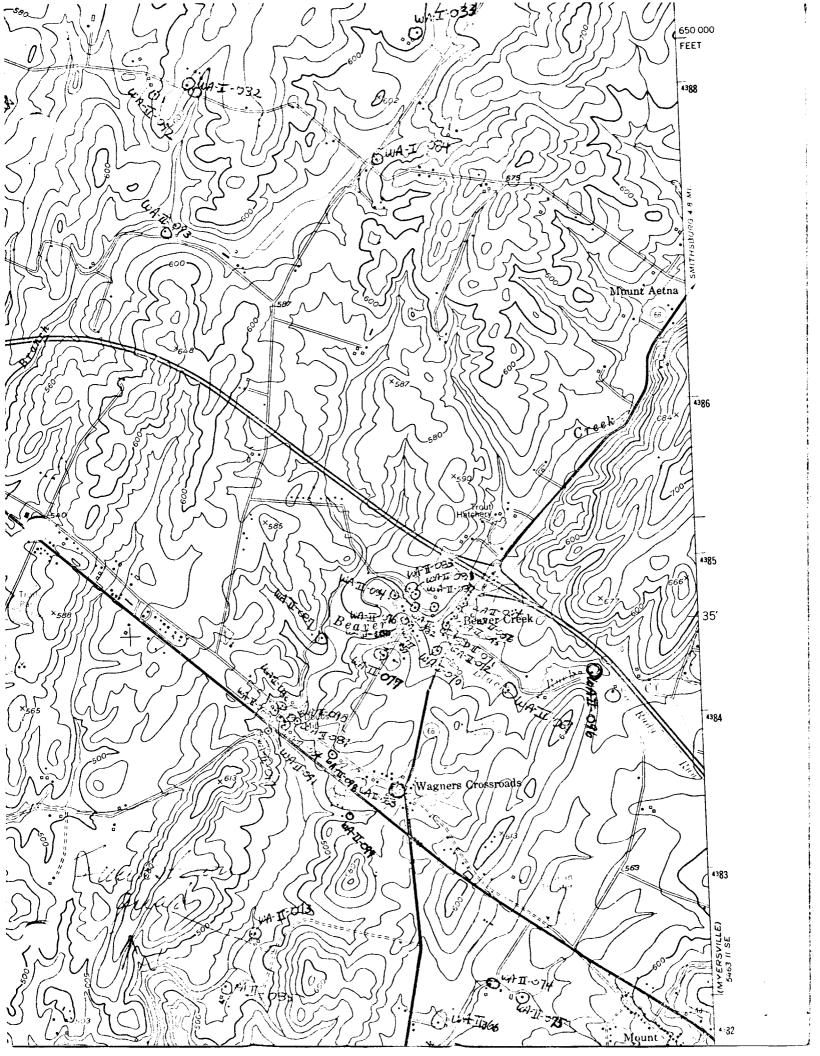

The house is in good to excellent condition and is being restored by the present owners.

Located a short distance west of the house is a large stone end bank barn which appears to be in fair to good condition.

The property contains 7.6 acres.
